ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS

Founding Dean of the School of Public Policy, University of California, Riverside, February 2013 – present

Responsible for all aspects of planning for a new professional school just launched at UCR – curriculum design, Senate approval of programs, budget, development and advancement, and recruitment of faculty, staff and students. At steady state, the School is expected to have approximately 200 students, including 125 in a Masters' of Public Policy program.

Associate Dean of Social Sciences, College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences (CHASS), University of California, Riverside (UCR), July 2008 – June 2012

Was responsible for department chair appointments and evaluation, faculty promotion and tenure, new faculty recruitment, graduate student affairs, and strategic planning for six social science departments and two interdisciplinary programs of the College that include nearly 150 faculty members, 40 staff members, and 300 graduate students.

Co-Director of the Center of Expertise on "One Health: Water, Animals, Food and Society," established under the UC Global Health Institute, October 2009 – June 2013

This Center is one of three Centers of Expertise under the newly-established University of California Global Health Institute. The One Health Center is involved in research, training, and outreach activities on global health problems arising from the human-water-animal-food interface, and is particularly focused on solutions to morbidity and mortality arising from malnutrition, unsafe water, and animal- and vector-borne diseases.

Director, Edward J. Blakely Center for Sustainable Suburban Development, UCR, July 2009 – December 2012

The Center conducts research and provides policy advice to local governments on a wide range of issues confronting suburbs and 'exurbs,' including economic growth, housing and suburban sprawl, air and water quality, water and energy sustainability, and loss of biodiversity. Currently, the Center manages nearly $5 million in research grants.

Director, Public Policy Initiative, University of California, Riverside, 2004 - present

Responsible for developing and managing a campus-wide, interdisciplinary initiative that has culminated in the recent establishment of the first professional school in more than two decades at UCR – the School of Public Policy. The School will offer Masters', doctoral and executive education programs in public policy, and will focus on environmental, health and higher education policy. Under the initiative, I also created a new interdisciplinary undergraduate major and minor in public policy on the UCR campus.

Interim Dean, Anderson Graduate School of Management (AGSM), University of California, Riverside, 2006-07

Was responsible for all academic, personnel, administrative, and budgetary functions of UCR's business school, which then had approximately 25 faculty members, 150 MBA students, and the largest undergraduate major (business administration) at UCR. During my stewardship, the School successfully implemented a new three-department structure (Accounting, Finance, and Marketing and Management). Reported directly to the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost.

Acting Chair, Department of Sociology, University of California, Riverside, 2005-06

Managed a department of 22 faculty members, and led it successfully out of receivership. During my short tenure, I worked closely with an outside mediator in bringing together disparate groups of faculty and graduate students within the department and in putting the unit back on a more sustainable future.

Graduate Student Advisor, Department of Economics, University of California, Riverside, 2003 - 2006

Was responsible for overall management of the Department's Ph.D. program, which had a total of 65 enrolled students. Responsibilities included admission of students into the program, awarding of assistantships and fellowships, proposing and implementing changes in the graduate curriculum, and advising graduate students on general academic and administrative matters.

Chair, South Asia Studies Program, and Director, South Asia Center, Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies, University of Washington, 2000–02

Managed a National Resource Center that offered a Master's program in South Asian studies, six South Asian language programs, and had more than a dozen affiliated faculty from seven humanities, arts, and social science departments. Was responsible for securing and managing the Title VI funding that the Center received from the U.S. Department of Education.

Director of Graduate Studies, University of Washington, 1991-95

Managed all aspects of the department's Ph.D. program (having approximately 75 students), including student admissions, fellowships, and graduate curriculum.

SELECTED POLICY AND CONSULTING EXPERIENCE

Nearly 30 years of experience in working with a number of governments and international development organizations in the areas of social policy, poverty assessment, monitoring and evaluation of projects, health and education sector reform, and science and technology policy in less-developed countries. Some selected assignments are listed below.

Empowerment and Public Service Delivery in Developing Asia and the Pacific. Co-author of a policy report by the Asian Development Bank, Manila, Philippines, May 2013.

Toward Higher Quality Employment in Asia. Lead author of a report by the Asian Development Bank for their flagship annual publication, Key Indicators for Asia and the Pacific 2011, Manila, Philippines, August 2011.

Toward Higher Quality Employment in Asia (2011). Lead author of a report by the Asian Development Bank for their flagship annual publication, Key Indicators for Asia and the Pacific 2011, Manila, Philippines, August 2011. Coordinated and integrated written inputs from five chapter contributors to the report.

Toward Higher Quality Employment in Asia (2011). Lead author of a report by the Asian Development Bank for their flagship annual publication, Key Indicators for Asia and the Pacific 2011, Manila, Philippines, August 2011. Coordinated and integrated written inputs from five chapter contributors to the report.

Quantifying the Economic Returns to Maternal Health Interventions (2011). Lead consultant to the World Bank on a review study of the economic returns to maternal and child health (MCH) interventions across the developing world.

The Rise of Asia’s Middle Class (2010). Lead author of a report by the Asian Development Bank for their flagship annual publication, Key Indicators for Asia and the Pacific 2010, Manila, Philippines, August 2010. Coordinated and integrated written inputs from six chapter contributors to the report.

Impact Evaluation of the One Laptop Per Child (OLPC) Project in Sri Lanka (2009 - present). Lead consultant on a World Bank project to measure the impact on student learning and other educational outcomes of a randomized intervention by the Sri Lankan Ministry of Education to provide each child in selected rural primary schools with an OLPC laptop. Baseline household, student, school and teacher surveys were completed in 2009, and a post-intervention survey was conducted in 2011 after laptops were randomly provided to all students in selected schools.

Impact of Market-Oriented Reforms on Poverty and Human Development in India, Indonesia and the Philippines (2007-08). Lead consultant on an Asian Development Bank (ADB) project “Measurement and Policy Analysis for Poverty Reduction.” Was responsible for developing overall research strategy and working with local consultants in the three countries on measuring the effect of specific reform policies on human development outcomes, including poverty, health, and education.

Accountability and Transparency in Public Spending (2006-present). Participated in a Brookings Institution project on “Accountability, Transparency and Management of Public Expenditure in Developing Countries.” Analyzed the role of civil-society and non-government organizations in monitoring government expenditures and promoting transparency, accountability and efficiency in public spending.

Local Government Finance in China (2005). Presented a seminar and a series of four lectures on “Local Government Finance in China: Lessons from Other Countries” at the Research Institute for Fiscal Science, Ministry of Finance, People’s Republic of China, on October 31 – November 4, 2005. The seminar and lectures were attended by individuals in government and academia.

Social Risks and Responses in Thailand (2004-05). Prepared a report and presented a workshop for the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection, Royal Thai Government. Using data from socioeconomic and labor force surveys over a 15-year period, I identified the population groups in Thailand that are vulnerable to economic and other shocks that can thrust them into poverty. The report analyzed the sources of this vulnerability and evaluated how well the different social assistance programs in Thailand target the vulnerable population and address their vulnerability.

Attaining the Millennium Development Goals in South Asia (2002-05). While based at the World Bank’s New Delhi office during 2002-03, I initiated a major research project on how likely the South Asian countries (India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka) were to attain the millennium development goals or MDGs – a set of numerical goals for several social indicators, agreed to by the international community – by 2015 and what it would take to attain these goals. The study consisted of using household survey data from each of the countries to estimate econometric models of poverty, infant mortality, child malnutrition, child schooling and gender disparity determination, and then using these models to simulate the likely trajectory of these variables from 2002 to 2015 under alternative policy scenarios.

Unemployment Insurance in Thailand (2002). I assisted the World Bank Thailand Office in conducting a research study to determine the economic feasibility as well as the distributional implications of a proposed unemployment insurance scheme. The study consisted of developing and running simulation models using unit record data from the Thailand Labor Force Surveys over the period 1990-2000.

Social, Cultural and Institutional Factors Affecting Poverty Reduction in Asia (2000-01). I was the team leader and lead consultant for an Asian Development Bank-sponsored study on the social, cultural and institutional factors affecting poverty reduction in eight developing countries – Bangladesh, Laos, Pakistan, Philippines, South Korea, Taiwan, Thailand, and Vietnam. The study team, which included anthropologists, economists, political scientists and governance specialists, drew upon primary and secondary data from the eight countries. The ADB will be publishing a monograph containing the study reports.

Social Protection and the Thai Economic Crisis (1999-2001). I assisted the World Bank Thailand Office in conducting studies to evaluate the socioeconomic impact of the 1997-98 economic crisis on Thai households and to determine how more aggressive social protection policies, such as unemployment assistance, rural public works projects, worker retraining schemes, and student loan programs, could have lessened the adverse income and poverty impacts of the crisis on households. The exercise drew heavily on household survey data collected before and after the crisis. The work was done in collaboration with the NESDB, the Thailand Development Research Institute, and the National Statistical Office of Thailand.

National Human Development Reports for Cambodia (1997-2000). I have assisted the United Nations Development Program and the Government of Cambodia (Ministry of Planning) in the annual preparation of four national human development reports (NHDRs) for Cambodia. The first of these reports (1997) was on poverty and human development, the second (1998) on women in Cambodia's development, the third (1999) on Cambodia's villages, and the fourth (2000) on child labor. All of the NHDRs used household survey and other data to describe the state of human development in the country and to emphasize priority areas for policy intervention.

Health-Sector Reform and Equity in Health Care in Vietnam (1998-2000). I worked with three government ministries (Ministry of Health, Ministry of Finance, and Ministry of Planning and Investment), six bilateral and multilateral donors, and a number of NGOs to prepare and draft a comprehensive health-sector review for Vietnam. The review, which was based on analysis of data from household longitudinal surveys, health facility surveys, and time-series data on provincial public spending, will ultimately form the basis of a sector investment plan for the Vietnam health sector. This work was carried out under the auspices of the World Bank with funds from Sida, AusAID and the Royal Netherlands Embassy.

Decentralization of Education in Three Asian Countries (1999). I assisted the Asian Development Bank in a study on the potential for decentralization of management and spending authority in the education sectors of three countries in Asia -- Bangladesh, Indonesia and the Philippines. The study was based on the experience of education decentralization in other countries, including the United States and countries in Latin America.

Building National Capacity in the Use of Household Socioeconomic Surveys for Poverty and Policy Analysis in Cambodia (1996-2000). I assisted the Government of Cambodia (Ministry of Planning) in designing a long-term poverty monitoring and analysis program that involved regular collection of household survey data on consumption, income, employment and social indicators, and analysis of these data to measure the magnitude of poverty, trends in poverty over time, and the impact of policy interventions and macroeconomic shocks on the poor. National capacity building in information-based policy analysis is a strong component of the program. (The program was funded by the United Nations Development Program and SIDA and executed by the World Bank.)

Analysis of Public Expenditure (1998-2000). I have participated in two separate public expenditure reviews (PERs) led by the World Bank. The first of these was for Cambodia (1998), and my specific tasks were to analyze patterns and trends in social-sector spending and to examine the distributional and efficiency impacts of health- and education-sector financing. For the second PER on Vietnam (2000), I contributed a chapter on issues in public spending on health.

Poverty Assessments in Cambodia, Laos, Philippines and South Africa (1994-99). Over the years, I have participated in four separate poverty assessments led by the World Bank in these countries. These assessments typically involve: defining the relevant poverty lines based on nutritional and other considerations, measuring the magnitude of poverty and changes in poverty over time, assessing the access of the poor to social services, developing targeting indicators for identifying the poor, and discussing policy options to alleviate poverty and improve the access of the poor to social services.

In addition, a sample of other short policy assignments in which I have participated in the past are listed below. These highlight the range of my professional interests.

- Sole author of a comprehensive sector review of primary and secondary education in Kenya for the World Bank (1998). The report was used as the basis for discussions on education-sector reform between the Government of Kenya and the World Bank.
- Consultant to the UNDP-Cambodia on the preparation of the first Common Country Assessment (CCA) for that country (1997-98). The CCA forms the basis for joint programming of all activities undertaken by U.N. agencies in a country.
- Lead consultant to the World Bank (1995-96) on health-sector reform projects in Kenya and Tanzania.
- Member of a World Bank team that prepared a social sector strategy for Ethiopia, 1996.
